UNION CONVENTION!

At a meeting of the Union members of the Legislature, ln the Honse of Representatives, on Monday evening, February 16th, 1863, ou motion, Hon. Joseph R. Underwood was polated Secretary. After a free and full consultation, it is recommen, to the Union Democracy of Kentucky, that they assemble in Convention, through their delegates, in the city of Louisville, on the 18th day of March next, and nominate sultable persons as candidates to fill the various State offices, to be chosen at the next Angust election. It is further recacaded that the people meet, at some envenient time and place, in their respective les, and appoint delegates to represent them in the Convention.

The President has been clothed with dictatorial power, abstractly considered. So far as this could be constitutionally done we are not prepared for censure. In a war of the magnitude of the present one, there can be little lajary If, during the vacation of Congress, he is clothed with all the necessary power for the protection of the country which the Constitution affords. It has been done before in emergencies, with no serious lning to the nation, though fortunately it has never been carried into effect—there being no necessity for it. In 1839, when we were threatened with troubles with Great Britain by the ad vance of a British army into the disputed territory of Maine, somewhat similar powers, in more limited degree, were granted, and the plan was approved by such statesmen as Clay, Webster and others of that day. In a greater peril we are not disposed to be captions, if we could feel that such tremendous; ower would not be abased. What causes the alarm is not opposition to a course that may be necessary to the salvation of the Union, but a settied distrust of those into whose hands it has been gives, arising from the motives which inluced Congress to confer lt.

The conclusion is anavoidable that the object was not so much to confer necessary powers to save the Union, as to render the calling together of Representatives fresh from the people unnecessary. Had it not been done, these newly elected members, a ma-jority of whom disagree with the mode of conducting the war, would necessarily have been called to Washington as a Congress. The very fact that this tremendous power, conferring all constitutional anthority, as well as permitting some unconstitutional measures, expressing the will of the people, is quite sufficient to awaken a feeling of alarm. It appears no longer as a measure to quell the reellion, but as designed to frustrate the latentions of the people. We may well panse before approving of a measure when its object is to overthrow what lies at the foundation of the

We have already pointed out the unparsileied magnitude of the anthority conferred, far exceeding the precedent of '39, and it needs. no great wledom to see that it is quite suffi clent to destroy every vestige of freedom. It may be said that we ought not to expect the power would be misused. How heartily we would rejoice if this could be made certain. But the past gives us no such assurance. No one promised fairer than Mr. Liucolu did at the crop; also for the purpose of more easily at first, and, for a time, uo one acted with more apparent regard for the Constitution, except in one or two instances. Unfortunately, be has lately falsified every promise made. A single idea has taken possession of his mind, and in the furtherance of it he has not hesit". ted to break all previous pledges. Liberty, the security of property, the safety of the Union, have all been imperiled in the fortherance of that object.

It most immediately interests us ln this State, as Mr. Lincoln has repeatedly assertec, and doubtless honestly believes, that the adoption of his scheme of emancipation would aid in anciling the rebelilion, and it is only proper to expect that he will use all the means conferred upon him to effect this object. We think it time the people should and doubtless honestly believes, that the take into calm consideration the means by out the fiber, the saws working between iron vision to everything pertaining to his comwhich he can effect this, and how it can be

Upon the principle that this State, so long as it is claimed by the rebellious States as a part of the Southern Confederacy, is Itself quas; rebel, and therefore subject to martial law, he can by proclamation deciare the slaves free, and enforce it by means of the army at his command. Against this we have no practical protection. As it is an act enforced contrary to the Constitution, we can only hope, by showing the evil that would be caused by such a policy, to induce him to withhold any such proclamation. We have no adequate force to rebel against the force at his command.

We do not apprehend, however, that he will thus use his authority, as he wishes it, for effect in the Southern States, to have some appearance at least of a voluntary act. It is more twely to be done indirectly. His insterneuts in this are first the public patronse, but, far more powerful, the enforcement martial law, but leaving us still the forms

State will aid in crushing the rebeilion, and needs the appointment of a General ln this State who will enforce this test. It need not be said that anti-emancipationists are disloyal in Intentions, but only in effect, and that uc one opposing emancipation shall be allowed to run for office. An emancipation Legisla ture could thus be chosen. The same thing was successfully done in Missonri the other

How is this to be prevented? We must be admit that the military are the sole judges of what is and what is not disloyalty in inteutions or effect. We must let our courts decide apon this. We know that there are some agreeing with our neighbor of the Journal who would consider this a "farce" We, too, think dieloyalists ought not to run, but would pre-fer that some one else beside a military officer should decide in the case of popular elections apon what is the disloyalty which unfits a man for office. Thousand a was taken cannot be founded. There was no military necessity for the act. There was nothing luvolving the safety of the army or its success.

The convention which meets here on the 18th may be dispersed upon the same principle. A military officer may judge that the convention will aid the rebeillon and disperse it. Cotton Growing.

Shall Kentucky and Sonthern Indiana go largely into the business of growing cotton? Is a question which we think may be answered in the affirmative. From estimates based on known facts, a farmer can see about how his account current would be likely to stand at the end of the year. It is reasonable to suppose that for the next year, and, perhaps, for the next two or three years, cotton will sell always have the warnest sympathics of my the next two or three years, cotton will sell high—say 50 couts per pound. That as much cotton can be produced here per acre, or to the hand, as is produced in the cotton States, is not are there any conditions consistent with a republican form of government which I am not pretended. From all the information we can gather from those who have grown cotton

It will cost less to grow an acre of cotton here than at the South for the reason that there will be less cotton to be picked; and the picking is the greatest part of the work. It is a very common remark that any cotton planter can ordinarily produce a great deal more cotton than he can pick and take care of. It comes then to a simple question of arithmetic: If the Southern cotton planter can produce cotton at a cost not expending for 7 cents a pennel, producing 4 to command the love and categories 4 to him a fond farewell, and express our sit cere sorrow at his loss as a friend and command the love and categories for 7 cents a pennel, producing 4 to command the love and categories for 7 cents a pennel, producing 4 to command and categories at the lower and categories for 7 cents a pennel, producing 4 to command and categories at the lower a for the reason that there will be less cotton to ceeding 6 or 7 cents a pound, producing 4 to 6 bales to the hand, and 4 to 6 hundred pounds to the sere, what will be the cost of producing unwavering devotion to the cause of the Union, cotton in Kentucky, 100 pounds to the acre, and feeling that our country, in this her day of and two baics to the hand? Then the chances are that in favorable seasons two hundred has compelled Col. Harlan to retire from the or more pounds may be produced. An immediate attack on Port Hadson by Gen. Banks is expected. The force under his ommand is believed by the rebels to number 30,000. The proceedings of our forces at Yazoo Pass appear to be well known, as the progress made in clearing out the obstructions for the passage of our gunboats is very accurately noted. Two rebel Generals have recently resigned-G. W. Smlth and Teombs and their resignations have been accepted by Jeff. Davis. The food question is generally discussed in the Southern papers. We see it stated that Ohlo cotton, grown last year, has been received in New York, and it is said that enough will be grown there this year to snpply the State.

A farmer, to grow cotton advantageously, should have a crop large enough to justify him in buying a gin and press. A common farm horse-power will be sufficient for say twenty-five bales, and a hay-press will do for bailing. The gin is a very simple machine tary.

STATES IN REBELLION. spirit of the Rebel Press-What the Rebels think of our Conscript Law.

[From the Richmond Examiner.] We publish a full synopsis of what is justly regarded as the most important document that has been published by the United States during ne war—The Federal Conscription Bill.
It will be perceived that this act is a very dierent instrument from the conscription It will be percelved that this act is a very different instrument from the conscription law now in force here. It is not framed upon our plau, but is a strict copy of the French, Bardinian and other European conscriptions. The draft on the population is much less general than that by our law, and will produce fewer recenits to the army in proportion to the numbers of the lahabitants. The principle of the Sonthern law is that every man shall be placed in the position where he can most effectively serve the country and aid the war. Hence it exempts only those engaged in eertain industrial pursuits, the continuation of which is indispensable to the subsistence of the army, the support of the Government in its legitimate functions, and those fundamental operations of social existence on which both depend. These classes are limited. But the Northern law of exemption is founded on various social distinctions, including great numbers, even if strictly interpreted, and which admit of almost unlimited stretching. The true meaning of this law is to be found in those clauses which relate to the return of meu and officers now absent from that vast army, existing on the pay-rolls of more than one million of men. The law does not seem intended to increase the numerical force of the United States—already larger than that courtry or any other can long maintain—nor will when the fire commences, the people go ont to witness it as a kind of amusement. United States—already larger than that country or any other can long maintain—nor will it do so. Its object seema to be, first—to prevent the men, whose term of enlistment has expired, from leaving their ranks in May. econd-to enable Llucoin to make such fu ture drafts ou the people as the waste of war may render uccessary, and to carry on the war without the assistance of the new Congress now about to enter on list crm, and in deliance of about to enter on its term, and in deflance of the majority of the people who desire a cessation of hostilities. These objects the law will certainly accomplish.

It is calculated to provoke great resistance from the people and the States. We cannot now estimate the power, extent, or results of the discontent and opposition. But we fear those who suppose that this opposition will render the law incperative, and end in a revolution, mistake the present condition of the North. It has been justly remarked that they assume the people of that country to be now what they formerly were, and gange their spirit and determination by the sentiment which still prevails among ourselves. They do not realize the fact that the Government of the United States has congesied late a despotism, and that its inhabitants have actually such down into the characteristics of abject, sunk down into the characteristics of abject trembling, and indenying slaves. It is the part of reason to anticipate the trimmph of Lincoln and the entire execution of the law. Nor need we stand appalled at its probable consequences. The Southern Government need only enforce in all the States the con-scription law now existing to procure such addition to its present army that it will not only be as great as the country can maintain, or as any Generals are capable of manenvering, but ahundantly sufficient to meet at all points ev-ery force that the Northern conscription will send to the field.

WHERE IS HOOKER'S ARMY? [From the Richmond Examiner, March 2.] After all the reports and rumors we have had of Hooker's army "changing his base," it is now believed that the bulk and strength of his forces are yet above Fredericksburg. It has been ascertained that no material substruction has been made from the army operating there, and that, with the exception of fifteen thousand men-sent to some unknown point—the Yackee force is quite as strong and formidable in numbers as it has ever been. This gives a new phase to the cituation about Fredericksburg, and will again make that old borough the center of interes!

THE RIGHT OF SECESSION. The papers are discussing Senator Johnson's bill to recognize "the right of a State to secede, even from the Southern Confederacy." Not a little acrimon y seems to exist upon the subject, and The Southern Recorder, of Feb. 24, thus alludes to it:

SECESSION—GOV. JOHNSON.—We are glad that Senator Johnson has withdrawn the hill he introduced lu Congress, to amend the Constitution, afilming the right of secession in a State. The doctrine has been practically asserted by all the States of the Southern Confederacy, yet we regard the step taken by the Georgia Senator as rather unfortunate, implying a want of confidence and harmony among courselves even in the strength. harmony among ourselves, even in the struggle for independence. On this subject, we make free to use a portion of a private letter to one of the Editors, from a gentleman who has served in the Legislature, and with whom it has been our fortune to agree on most public questions. Referring to the amendment to the Constitution proposed by Gov. Johnson,

The bombardment is represented to have been terrific. ## Trouble in East Tennessee.

[From the Knoxville Register.] The news from Johnson and Carter is quite gloomy. These et unties are seriously infected with disloyalty and bushwhackers. A severe engagement occurred on Friday, the 23d ult., between a large body of these men and Cot. We think it by far the hest course for the South to forbear such agitation during the war, and not to engage in courtoversy until it has been determined by the sword whether we nave a separate nationality. Then, as the eccasion may arise, we can discuss our home policy and adjust it on such principles as will comport with our system of Government.
